WORTHINGTON NATIONAL BANK ANNOUNCES NEW VICE PRESIDENT

Fort Worth, Texas – Worthington National Bank announced today that the company has hired Dan Buchanan as vice president, mortgage lending. In this role, he will continue to work with his existing business partners and clients as well as strategizing with commercial lenders to grow the bank’s mortgage lending portfolio.

“Buchanan’s extensive banking expertise and his community spirit will serve our clients well as customer service is the core of our banking principles,” said Worthington National Bank President Cee Yager.

Buchanan has served 14 years in banking and finance, with eight of those years in lending. Active in several Fort Worth area organizations, his passion for community involvement aligns with the values of Worthington National Bank. Buchanan has a finance degree from Mays Business School at Texas A&M University.

“In addition to providing superior service to my existing and prospective real estate partners and clients, Worthington offers me the opportunity to assist customers that may not fit the traditional mortgage box. I can truly benefit my customers from the ground up and everywhere in between, whether it be a loan for construction, purchase or refinance,” said Buchanan.

Initially, Buchanan will work at Worthington National Bank’s Sundance Square location in preparation for the bank’s future west side growth plans to Edwards Ranch.

About Worthington National Bank

Worthington National Bank, one of the few locally owned and operated banks in Tarrant County, puts a priority on relationship-based banking. There are no 1-800 numbers and no automated phone systems. Offering checking, savings, money market accounts, loans and mortgage services, Worthington National Bank’s philosophy is that all customers are treated the same and clients are a name, not a number. Additionally, Worthington is committed to serving its communities and preserving Texas heritage, history and art. For more information, please visit our site.
